

Three generations. A concealed guilt. A valley that will not talk.

A remote Swiss mountain valley, a reservoir – and a death recorded sixty years ago as an accident. Across three generations a family carries a concealed guilt: the grandmother who stays silent; the son who finds the truth and uses it; the granddaughter who returns in a drought summer, when the sinking lake releases what it hid for so long.

A quiet, precise generational drama about silence, money, and what remains when the water falls.
